Middle School Students are in a class all their own. Their hormones are raging. They want to fit in at all costs and may also be dealing with bullying. In these pages, teachers have classroom-friendly activities that will challenge their middle-level learners to think and behave differently, to learn to value differences in one another, and to work to actively prevent bullying. All of the activities are designed to keep students engaged and active. To help teachers make the most of these activities, Zentic ties the social skills and activities to their respective executive function.
